STUDENT LOAN TIPS

Find out what other financial aid you qualify for before applying for a student loan. Grants, scholarships and work-study usually don't have to be repaid.

Student loans have to be repaid, whether you finish your education or like the school or program. You're taking on a commitment that can improve your future but also requires you to be responsible. Making your payments on time shows that you're a good credit risk. That will help when you need to borrow money for a car, home or other purchases. Here are some tips that will help you to borrow wisely.

TIP 1: FIND OUT THE SCHOOL'S COST AND REFUND POLICY

Ask a financial aid officer how much the total cost of attending school will be. Also, ask the aid office or check the student handbook to find out the school's refund policy. Make sure you do the entrance counseling that is required before you receive your first Federal Direct Loan.

TIP 2: CHECK OUT THE JOBS THAT INTEREST YOU

Make sure the job opportunities and pay mean you can earn enough to pay back what you borrow and leave you enough to live on. Defaulting on a student loan has drastic consequences, so don't go into a field where you won't earn enough money.

TIP 3: LEARN ABOUT STUDENT LOANS BEFORE YOU BORROW

The less you borrow, the less you'll have to pay back. Borrow only what you need.

The interest on Direct Loans changes each year. The chart shows the approximate monthly payments for various amounts at 4.99 percent interest. The Loan Repayment Calculator on kheaa.com lets you estimate payments based on amount borrowed, interest rate and repayment time.

TIP 4: THINK ABOUT NEXT YEAR

Most financial aid programs have renewal requirements and some limitations such as:

- Showing satisfactory academic progress
- Requiring you to reapply each year.
- Limiting the total number of years aid can be received.

Before you transfer to another school, be sure to check on the status of your financial aid.

TIP 5: LEARN ABOUT REPAYMENT OPTIONS

You usually have up to 10 years to repay your student loans, with your monthly payment based on how much you owe. Choose a repayment option best for you.

When you start making payments, pay a little extra. If you pay an extra $10 each month, $120 a year, the extra money is applied to the principal, which lowers the total interest you end up paying.

Before you enter repayment, you will go through exit counseling to help you understand your obligations.

If you have any trouble making your payments, contact your loan servicer immediately. You may be able to postpone or reduce your payments temporarily.

BE WARY OF STUDENT LOAN REPAYMENT COMPANIES

If you're repaying federal student loans, be leery of sales pitches from companies offering to help you lower your payment.

Some companies charge high fees to submit forms you can file for free. Many will charge monthly fees for monitoring your loans. Again, you can do that for free.

Contact the servicer the U.S. Department of Education has assigned your loan to. Someone there can tell you what your options are and help you with the forms you need. If you don't know who your servicer is, go to ed.gov and click on "Student Loans" to find a link to servicers. You'll also find information about repayment options there.

COMPARING COSTS

If you've been accepted by more than one school, compare the aid offers to decide which school is offering you the best financial aid notification.

An aid offer usually shows the total cost of attendance: tuition, fees, room, meals, books, supplies, transportation and personal expenses. It may also show your SAI.

The letter will list the financial aid the school is offering you — loans, grants, scholarships, work-study. You can accept or reject any or all of those sources.

At the back of this book, you'll find a School and Package Comparison chart to compare the cost and awards for two schools. We've filled in one column with sample numbers that don't come from a real school. Let's take a look at the sample column to see how it's done.

The sample assumes that you'll be taking a full load of classes and have a $2,000 SAI.

Your total cost of attendance is $17,000 for one year, so your financial need is $15,000.

You qualify for a $5,000 Pell Grant and $1,800 College Access Program Grant. You've earned $1,700 in KEES awards, and the college has offered you a $500 scholarship. You also qualify for $700 in work-study. Those awards total $9,700, leaving you $5,300 short of what you need. That's where direct loans kick in. You qualify for a $5,300 subsidized Direct Loan, meaning the federal government pays the interest on the loan while you're in college. Your financial aid awards total $15,000.

You don't have to accept everything in the financial aid package. You can pick and choose the awards that are best for you.

Take all the free financial aid you can get — grants, scholarships and work-study. If you still need help, take the loans — but only what you absolutely need.

If you really want to go to a particular school but the financial aid package isn't enough, contact the financial aid office. The school may be able to come up with additional funds.

College costs are divided into direct (or billable) costs and indirect (or nonbillable costs).

DIRECT COSTS are what you have to pay to start college. They include tuition and fees. If you're going to live in school-provided housing, billable costs will include food and housing. They're called "billable" because the school will bill you for them.

INDIRECT COSTS include everything else — textbooks, supplies (such as pens and notebooks), transportation and personal items (soap, shampoo, clothes, entertainment, laundry, etc.).

You can save quite a bit in food and housing and nonbillable costs by smart shopping.

Textbooks are expensive, so buy used books or rent books if possible. Check bookstores and online to find the best price. Some schools now include textbooks with tuition.

Supplies may cost you less at discount stores. If you're going to a school nearby, you can save food and housing by living at home or sharing an apartment. However, some colleges require freshmen to live on campus.

Once you've compared costs, you and your parents can sit down and discuss ways to save on nonbillable costs.

To find out the billable costs for the school you're interested in attending, see the school pages in Chapter 3.

ASK THE FINANCIAL AID OFFICE

LET'S LOOK AT WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT COSTS AND FINANCIAL AID FROM THE SCHOOLS YOU'RE APPLYING TO.

First of all, find out what financial aid forms you have to fill out and what the deadlines are. Some schools also have an application for institutional aid. Ask the financial aid office about any aid programs it has in addition to state and federal programs.

Secondly, find out how much it will cost to attend each school for a year. You'll want the costs broken down by:

- Tuition.
- Fees.
- Room.
- Board.
- Books and supplies.
- Transportation.
- Personal expenses.

In Chapter 3, you'll find costs for Kentucky colleges. Look at those costs closely.

You should ask the financial aid office how local scholarships will affect your financial aid. You should also ask if financial need will affect the school's decision about admitting you.

Other things to check on:

- Will your award be reconsidered if your family's financial situation changes?
- Can you expect roughly the same financial aid package each year?
- How much of your package includes student loans and parent loans?
- What is the average loan debt of incoming freshmen expected to be?

Finally, ask the financial aid office for a list of everything it needs from you if you accept the package

MANAGING YOUR MONEY

LEARNING TO MANAGE YOUR MONEY WILL LEAD TO A LESS STRESSFUL LIFE.

The first step is to set up a realistic budget, which tracks the money you make versus the money you spend.

Track Your Cash

A budget, or a money plan, tracks the money you make versus the money you spend.

If you're not on your own, your parents may cover most of your expenses. But if you have a job, they might expect you to contribute toward your phone bill, car payments and insurance, or spending money.

You create a budget by estimating how much money you'll make each month and how much you'll spend. It's a great way to avoid running out of money when you need it most.

Best of all, a budget will show you how much you have to save for your savings goals.

There are many budgeting apps that can help students keep track of their incomes and expenses. Check the app store on your smartphone for a list of popular budgeting apps.

Banking

Learning about banking is a key step in understanding finances.

Find out what features banks offer for savings and checking accounts. Watch the overdraft fees the bank will charge if you don't have enough money in your account to cover your purchase, ATM withdrawal or debit charge. Banks can require you to have a minimum balance to waive an account fee. Fees can add up quickly, so choosing your bank and the type of account can make a difference.

Find a way to keep track of all the money you take out of your account. Pick the way that best fits your lifestyle. Monitor your spending carefully. Know your bank balance when you buy something. If the money isn't there, you'll be embarrassed.

Keep an eye on your money and the fees your bank is charging. You might spot a rare error. Most banks have a time limit on disputing errors on your account, so the sooner it's spotted, the sooner you can take care of it.

How to Open an Account

Some banks will do a full credit report (see page 41) to see if you're a good risk for them to add you as a customer. They'll take your identification (typically a driver's license) and your Social Security number to verify your information. Once they determine you're eligible, you can deposit money into your new account. Sign up or enroll in your bank's online banking program so you can check your balance, pay bills and manage your money electronically from its website or mobile app.

- Record any interest you may have earned.
- Check the fees you were charged.
- Add your deposits and interest to the beginning balance shown on your statement.

CREDIT 101

Credit cards

How can textbooks and pizzas cost you big time? It's easy: charge them to a credit card and don't pay the card off each month.

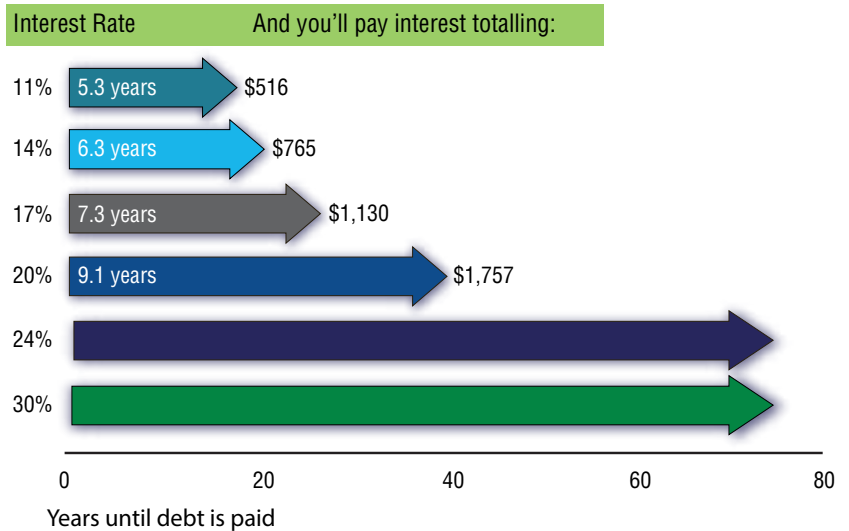

Let's say you have a credit card with a line of credit of $2,000. But after pizzas, books and all the other things that you just didn't have the cash for, you owe $1,500.

The minimum payment may be $30 a month. But if you only pay the minimum or skip your payments for a couple of months, you can get in financial trouble.

Before buying, ask yourself if you can really afford it. Once you've figured out how much you can responsibly charge on your cards, keep track of your spending just like you do for your bank account. When you've hit that limit, stop using your card.

HOW LONG DOES IT TAKE TO PAY OFF A $1,500 CREDIT CARD?

If you charge $1,500 and only make a minimum 2% payment each month WITHOUT charging anything else, it can take YEARS to pay off. At 24% and 30% interest rates, making only the minimum payment is not enough to pay off your account.

What's Your FICO® Score?

Why worry?

You're building a credit score. If you pay your bills late, it will affect the interest you pay on your credit card or car loan, your apartment deposit, even your insurance. When you get a bill, pay it on time.

A credit score is based on your payment history. The higher the score, the less risk lenders see in loaning you money. A FICO score, or credit score, is a measure of creditworthiness. In other words, it tells lenders and other interested parties (such as an employer) how good you are at being a responsible borrower and paying your debts on time. The higher your credit score, the better it is. Some people think you have to have a credit card to build a credit score. But if you open utility accounts in your name, have a rental lease, or borrow and repay student loans, you can build a respectable credit score in six months. Some banks even offer credit builder loans for this purpose (based on a term of 3 years).

A FICO score, or credit score, is a measure of being a responsible borrower and paying your debts on time.

The higher your credit score, the better it is.

If you can't pay a bill immediately, contact the lender to work out a payment arrangement. Don't ignore calls and letters from companies you owe. Explain everything in writing so you have a record of it. Most companies will work with you if you're honest with them. Look at your finances so you can tell your creditor what you can afford now and when your situation improves.

Any late payment stays on your credit report for seven years, even if you've completely paid off the creditor. It's better to start off on the right foot by establishing checking and savings accounts, pay all your bills on time, use your credit cards sparingly and pay the bill off every month.

ARE YOU IN OVER YOUR HEAD WITH CREDIT CARD DEBT?

If you check any of these circles, you could be in over your head.

- You're taking cash advances on your credit cards to pay your everyday living expenses.
- You're taking cash advances to pay on your other credit cards.
- You're spending over 20 percent of your income on installment credit.
- You're charging purchases you used to pay for with cash.
- You're making only minimum payments on your credit cards.
- Is your overall debt increasing every month?
- Do you owe more now than you did this time last year?
- You're using more than two credit cards.
- You're paying late fees and high interest charges.
- You're paying your bills later and later.
- You're hearing from bill collectors, asking when they can expect their money.

Recognizing the warning signs is only half the battle. Once you know you have a problem, you have to do something about it. Don't be afraid to ask for help.

CREDIT CARD RULES

Here's what you need to know about the laws on consumer credit accounts. Credit card companies:

- Are limited in increasing the rate on transferred balances during the account's first year.
- Can't typically apply higher interest rates to existing card balances.
- Must inform consumers of rate increases or other significant changes 45 days in advance.
- Must honor "teaser" rates for six months.
- Must mail statements at least 21 days before payment is due.
- Are required to provide more timely and clear disclosure statements displaying due date and potential late fees. The statement also must include interest paid in the current year, the monthly payment required to pay off an existing balance and a warning about the costs of making only minimum payments.
- Are required to post standard card agreements on the Internet.
- Must set a consistent due date for payments each month. If the due date falls on a holiday or weekend, the deadline is usually the next business day.
- Are restricted on penalties they may charge for going over the credit limit.
